

The SCC and Haga Initiative invite to a seminar

A low-carbon society through international law

On 16 May 2019, the Arbitration Institute of the Stockholm Chamber of Commerce and Haga Initiative invite to a seminar that will explore how international law can contribute to creating a low carbon society.

The Paris Agreement has been successful in carving out the road ahead to address climate change. But does it incentivize enough action on the ground? Welcome to an afternoon where we will explore how international law could truly make a difference for climate change mitigation and adaptation. The seminar also aims to celebrate the conclusion of the first edition of the global innovation competition, Stockholm Treaty Lab.

Below is the preliminary program:

- 15.00 – 15.15 Welcome by SCC Secretary General Annette Magnusson and the Haga Initiative Executive Director Nina Ekelund
- 15.15 – 15.30 Opening address by the Swedish Ambassador for Climate Change, Lars Ronnås
- 15.30 – 16.15 Panel discussion: What is holding investors back from scaling up green investments? (speakers invited from financial institutions)
- 16.15 – 16.30 Coffee break
- 16.30 – 17.15 Presentation of winning teams of the Stockholm Treaty Lab: How to boost green investments through international law? Martin Dietrich Brauch (Creative Disrupters) and Amelia Keene (Team Innovate).
- 17.15 Cocktail reception

Date: 16 May 2019

Venue: Arbitration Institute of the Stockholm Chamber of Commerce , Brunnsgatan 2

Please register on this link, at the latest by 9 May.

Contact: Sukma.andrina@chamber.se.